Killed Her To Save Her From "Bleak Future"

London Professor Held On Murder Charge; Intended Suicide

London, Jan. 15.—(U.P.)—Professor Arthur Lloyd-Jones, English language expert, charged today with slaying his wife, was quoted in a London court as saying he killed her to save her from a "bleak future" when he found "I could not cope with my work."

She was a victim, it was said, of a "bleak future" when he found "I could not cope with my work."

The professor, linguistic adviser of the British Broadcasting corporation, was ordered held for another hearing Jan. 24.

Under English law, a prisoner does not enter a plea on his first appearance in court. At that time only evidence on the arrest is heard from police.

Lloyd-Jones appeared today when he took the prisoner's stand and gave evidence on the charge of murdering his wife.

VALLEY HEADERS IN TOURNEY STRUGGLES TONIGHT

Patty's Happy; She's Lost All Those Freckles

My HENRY McEMORE—Peace has come to Patty Berg and she says it's wonderful.

The little red-head finally has lost the freckles which were as much her golfing trademark as her distance off the tee. Also, since she turned professional, she has released a half-dozen of her dearest friends from the tortures they suffered when she was trying to win championship honors as an amateur.

I talked to Patty in Hollywood last night and no longer is she the "Moppy" she was when she was playing golf on her own, with pole and sunscreen which she showed only when she addressed a ball on the green. She was pleased when I told her her freckles were really gone.

"Thank goodness for that," I hoped she said. "I've been in the Chicago of the Hollywood Roosevelt hotel, where she is staying while giving golf clinics in nearby California. 'You'll never know honey I was once an amateur on those darn freckles. I never could see how they were cute and at one time I had 20 different kinds of freckle lotion. I had so many of those jars that I had to carry them in my golf bag.'"

Her Dad Suffered
But the greatest happiness which has come to Patty because of her desertion of the amateur ranks is the knowledge that no longer are her friends and her father's friends as much of a burden as they were when she was an amateur.

"You remember how dad suffered," she said. "I recall the stories you wrote about the way dad used to wander around the course when I was playing as an amateur. He was afraid to get close enough to me to make a bad shot and so at some time was afraid to get so far away he couldn't hear about it."

I asked her if she still has all those freckles like a lost soul in Patty's white and white freckles which Mr. Berg used to carry under an arm while wandering like a lost soul in Patty's white and white freckles.

"No still alive, but scarcely," she answered. "Dad, I've never so hard the year I won the national women's championship that I never had been the same. He already was weak from the winning the title in 1935. He had lost his appetite and he was taking him out in his golf shoes. He had lost his appetite and he was taking him out in his golf shoes."

Mr. Berg was not the only one who was a sign of relief when Patty stopped on her golf career. There is her brother, Herman, Jr., who came close to breaking his neck when she won the national title. He was a step-ladder when she won the title. He was a step-ladder when she won the title.

Three Others Happy
Frank Funk, Joe Lockwood and Marshall Nelson are three of the many who are happy because of the fact that Patty is no longer an amateur. They are three of the many who are happy because of the fact that Patty is no longer an amateur.

They had given me a pop tail before I started, and I was the first to start. Mr. Funk told me that he was the first to start. Mr. Funk told me that he was the first to start.

At this point the waiter brought the check and I left a gallant southern gentleman who couldn't bear the sight of a woman paying the bill.

Bradley And Manteno In Opening Games

Catching A Few Off First: By ORREN ALLAN

Even though a fine glass of beer covered the fairway yesterday and though it is a pretty distant cry to the warm, sunny days when you step up to the tee and sock one for a few hundred yards, golf nevertheless is the local sports act.

Arthur Beckman and C. A. Hollison, members of the committee organized to hire a professional at the Kankakee Country club, announced that Harry Nelson would be pro at the club again this year.

Nelson has been a popular figure in golf hereabouts for a number of years. His consistency has gained him a place among the leaders in the three open tournaments sponsored by the Kankakee Country club.

Bradley, defending champion, lost only one conference game to date, that to Manteno, and the hands of Herscher. Each has been victorious in times when the odds were against him.
